ARTIST SPOTLIGHT

“I took a circuitous route to get into art, but it’s where I needed to be,” says Rick McKinney, the lead artist of Fired Earth Pottery in Appleton. For the past 20 years, he has turned his passion for clay into something more than a career in art – he works to create what he calls “a clay community in the Fox Cities.” McKinney’s work is not just in pottery, but also in people.

Fired Earth began in 1997 as an empty set of rooms in the heart of downtown Appleton. He has since built or installed furnishings – tables, workbenches, shelves, kilns, and tools that McKinney himself created.

In 2003, McKinney started a company, MKM Pottery Tools, to sell these tools.

MKM got its start with Decorating Disks, a guide for measuring and creating even facets on slab pots; the store also offers small, wooden, machine-carved rollers and stamps. These tools allow potters to simply and easily create, in his words, “an active, dynamic surface not achievable any other way.” McKinney now sells these and many other tools to potters worldwide.

But Fired Earth isn’t just for McKinney or visiting artists-in-residence. Three times a week, McKinney and another potter, Angie Bougie, teach pottery classes, and the studio comes alive with new ceramic creators at work. Their students, newbies and experts alike, can take their interest in pottery in any direction: they’ve created glaze colors, sculpted figurines, and thrown on the potter’s wheel.

Tippy Pitcher (2012)

Each eight-week pottery course culminates in a kiln-opening potluck, which is a time for Appleton’s clay community to come together. Before the potluck, “all the students load their stuff into a massive, gas-fired kiln that takes up its own room,” McKinney says. “Hundreds of [unfinished works] are piled up.” The kiln then fires up, and “15-20 hours later it’s done. The whole kiln is...full of shiny, beautiful objects guaranteed to last for 5,000 years.”

According to McKinney, the act of making pottery is more than creating something tangible; it also has significance. “History is a negotiated place,” McKinney says. “What I like about clay is that it’s much simpler. You create the piece, take it to the market and sell it. The work is beautiful, functional and permanent.”

Fired Earth starts the next session of pottery classes on March 7, 8 and 9. Learn more about McKinney and his work at mkm potterytools.com or at firedearthpottery.org.

Fox Valley Lutheran High School

Choose FVL for Faith, Values and Learning

Fox Valley Lutheran High School of Appleton is growing. Conveniently located just off I-41 on the city's northside, FVL's friendly, Christian family atmosphere attracts students from across the Fox River Valley.

"Newcomers are often surprised to learn that FVL Schools serve over 3,000 students on a daily basis," says Enrollment Director Ben Priebe. While many students come from the Appleton area, parents from Green Bay, Oshkosh, Waupaca, Shawano, Wrightstown and many communities in between have chosen FVLHS for their teen's high school education.

"I can't believe how often I hear people say that we have a beautiful campus, but they've never been inside our school," says Principal Steve Granberg. "We love to give families and community members a close-up look at all the good things going on at our campus."

Growing enrollment means the school will reach 600 students next fall. According to Priebe, FVL offers learning in a safe, comfortable environment with a low student-teacher ratio. Since the new campus opened in 2000, FVL has been growing its I-20 international student program as well. For the past decade, the school has hosted about 50 foreign students annually. They come from China, Spain, Germany, Korea, South America, and many other countries; over 40 flags hang in the Commons to represent the global exposure FVL students receive.

Some think that private Christian schools are only interested in college-bound students. FVL's commitment has always been to serve the interests of all students. The school offers a wide variety of courses for students of all academic levels from guided studies to CAPP and AP courses. Historically, FVL students have scored above state and national averages on college tests like the ACT. FVL has consistently been among the top five in the Valley.

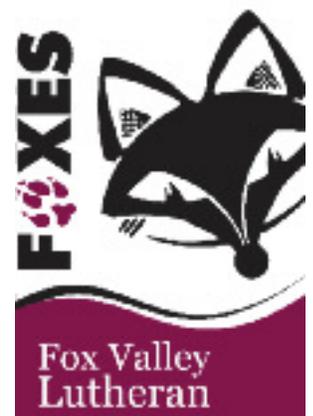

In 2016-17, all students received a Lenova Yoga laptop computer as part of their tuition. Plus, the school's new Metals Shop opened this fall and has been a popular choice for students. A partnership with Fox Valley Technical College has also allowed FVL students to receive professional automotive training. FVL students are well-prepared for the future whether they choose employment, the military or further education. "Each year, 80-90 percent of our grads continue their schooling — many in the UW system. Marquette and UW-Madison are popular choices," Granberg says.

FVL's STEM Academy is rapidly earning a strong reputation. For the past three years its VEX Robotics Team has competed at the World Championship competition. Many other extracurricular programs are offered both in athletics and activities that include drama, forensics, Student Council, NHS, and much more.

The Wisconsin Parental Choice Program has made FVL even more affordable. This year, 91 students benefited from the School Choice program that provides fully paid tuition for qualifying families. With the Choice enrollment cap rising for 2017-18 in every school district, more students than ever will be eligible. For eligibility and registration information, visit fvlhs.org.

"As a Christian school—whether it's in the classroom or the wide variety of co-curriculars and athletics our students participate in—we want them to know they are the next generation of leaders and that they can make a difference in the world," Granberg says. His words echo the school's mission statement of offering students a Christ-centered education that prepares them for lives of service now and for eternity.

To learn more about FVL, visit the school at 5300 N. Meade Street in Appleton or go online at fvlhs.org.

Wisconsin Maps Through the Years

Explore the history and geography of Wisconsin in a unique exhibit featuring 14 Wisconsin maps at the Elisha D. Smith Public Library in Menasha, on display March 1–31 during library hours. The maps, dating from 1703 to 1989, are part of a detailed collection owned and curated by Fox Valley history enthusiast Tom Sutter.

One of the oldest maps is from Baron Lahontan, a Frenchman who explored this part of New France in 1688. Also featured in the exhibit is an 1839 lithographed map by Nathaniel Currier and an 1873 Gray's Atlas map showing the magical railroad lines that had begun to cross the state. A 1924 state highway map, which reveals the advent of the roads we now take for granted, exclaims, "It is harder to get lost in Wisconsin than to find the way in many states."

Sutter will give a special presentation on Sunday, March 12 at 2 p.m. with additional maps and atlases.

A Kitchen Restoration: Victorian Style

Beginning in March, visitors to Appleton's Hearthstone Historic House Museum will have access to one area of the home never before shown on tour – the kitchen – just in time for the museum's 30th anniversary celebrations in 2017.

Hearthstone opens for the season on March 2. Tours, offered during regular business hours, will highlight the restored Victorian kitchen and exhibits about the home's various eras and families who lived there.

"The kitchen is significant because it's the first true restoration project that we have done in 18 years," says Cheryl Kaczmarek, president, Friends of Hearthstone, Inc.

Until now, the kitchen, which had been remodeled in the 1960s, served as a multipurpose room, kitchen, office and meeting area for the organization. The original layout for the kitchen re-design was created by Studio Kitchens in Appleton.

Every detail was thoroughly researched, down to the wainscoting and paint colors, to ensure the kitchen is historically accurate to the original home that was first owned by businessman Henry J. Rogers and his wife, Cremora.

"The kitchen's design is based on Charles Eastlake's modern way of designing homes. It did not become popular until the 1890s," Kaczmarek says. "It was considered futuristic by many. It's an exciting project that will give us a chance to showcase Rogers' forward-thinking, entrepreneurial spirit and techno-geeky side."

The scullery, a small room on the north end of the kitchen, was converted into a working galley kitchen. The west wall features a Victorian sink next to a modern dishwasher cleverly hidden in a new built-in cupboard constructed by Dale Stiebs, lead carpenter for the restoration. The east wall will be a focal point on public tours, showcasing Hearthstone's cast iron stove, pie safe and Victorian work table. Against the south wall, visitors will see the icebox next to the back porch door where deliveries were likely made.

"The house went through hard times during the recession. The fact that we are now back on our feet and have a great base of volunteers, donors and founders shows the vitality of the organization," Kaczmarek says. "It's a big milestone for us."

Must-See Art Show: screen/ing

March 22–May 5
Aylward Gallery at UW-Fox Valley, Menasha

Milwaukee-based artist Jessica Fenlon's "screen/ing" will debut at UW-Fox Valley's Aylward Gallery on March 22. The show consists of three new media art pieces, which are artworks produced using computers and other technology-based media.

"We all use computers and we all use smartphones," says Fenlon. "The artist who presents work on those platforms is delivering it directly to viewers, so there's something more intimate to that."

Two pieces in the show will be experienced as light projections with images responding to audio input from the gallery space. In Fenlon's projection-based sculpture "portable neurosis," she coded an environment where words become brushstrokes and the painting becomes an animation that changes with every show.

Fenlon says the transformative nature of her work may surprise some viewers.

"A painting relies on us changing to come back to see it again, but these generative pieces will change in a way that they may need to be viewed again or you might need more time to look at the work," she says.

A third piece, titled "brokenAlphabet," will be broadcast on campus video monitors in 15 to 30-second video clips. A special video screening and discussion will take place on March 29 at 7 p.m. and will include Fenlon's short film, "ungun," as well as other experimental artworks.

A closing reception is scheduled for May 5 at 5 p.m. For more information, visit Fenlon's website at www.station-number-six.com or call the Aylward Gallery at 832-2824.

35+ YEARS EXPERIENCE

Harry and
Bess Houdini

The Magic of Appleton

On March 25, The History Museum at the Castle will partner with Pop Up Fox Cities and Now Serving Magic to present an evening of culinary delights and illusions commemorating the birthday of Harry Houdini, who briefly lived in Appleton.

The three-course meal, which will be served in the Museum's Ogilvie Hall, was developed as an ode to Houdini and his wife, Bess, who enjoyed dining out lavishly and often. It consists of delicacies such as aromatic poached beet terrine, wood and juniper roast pork shoulder and a bittersweet chocolate bread pudding for dessert.

RJ Lynch, Now Serving Magic

In between each course, magic sets will be performed on the Ogilvie Hall stage by local magicians, including RJ Lynch, producer of Now Serving Magic; Mark Von Schroeder, recreator of Houdini's iconic straitjacket escape from a crane in Appleton; and Jake Eggert, magician and owner of Mischief and Magic Entertainment in Green Bay.

Attendees are invited to bring their own beer or wine, but soft drinks, Colectivo Coffee, hot chocolate and herb elixir mint tea will also be available.

The show begins at 6:30 p.m. For tickets, visit www.popupfoxcities.com or www.now-servingmagic.com.

Hot Home REVAMPS

By Hibah Ansari

Looking to update your home in 2017? Consider these top trends.

Minimalism is having a serious moment in interior design, and its futuristic appeal is attractive to designers and homeowners alike. The Fox Cities are seeing a merge of the globally trending minimalist style and a rustic elegance rooted in Wisconsin culture. If you're planning to remodel your home this spring, keep an eye on these fresh trends.

Fresh Color Palettes with Rustic Texture

Pantone's 2017 Color of the Year, greenery, pairs great with trending color combinations like gray and white. Take it a step further and contrast this clean color palette with medium- or darker-toned woodwork or furniture. Verdant green combined with various woods is very reminiscent of lush forests in the upper Midwest, and home remodelers are embracing it wholeheartedly.

"People are liking green around here, but they love bringing in some interesting [wood] grain as an accent," says Tina VanCamp, interior designer at Arn's Cabinets in Little Chute. "I really like the idea of mixing and matching and putting depth in your home."

Tuxedo cabinets (dark lower cabinets contrasted by light uppers) with a twist are also on the rise as painted cabinets are making their way into everyone's homes. Paul Welhouse, owner of Welhouse Construction Services in Kaukauna, favors going gray with pops of color. If you're feeling bold, consider painting cabinets in non-traditional colors. While tuxedo cabinets are traditionally black and white, VanCamp suggests mixing woods rather than colors for a familiar yet contemporary version of this trend. Rustic woods paired with clean lines and modern elements will add more depth to your design and diversify your home, VanCamp adds. "People can go from room to room and enjoy the feel of the room, and love their home for longer," she says.

Craftsmanship vs. DIY

While do-it-yourself projects have trended the past couple of years, an emphasis on craftsmanship has taken the front seat. "I think the DIY trend is about how we can shape something to work for us," says VanCamp. "With remodeling, craftsmanship is more possible. It's what gets people excited, since you can start from scratch."

Welhouse says there is more of a demand in craftsmanship when it comes to things like crown moldings, floating shelves and custom cabinetry in high-end kitchens and bathrooms. Since real wood is back in style, Welhouse recommends collaborating with remodelers who specialize in woodwork. By paying close attention to functionality and design, you can maintain your home's value for years. Tod Raehl, owner of Tod Raehl Remodeling & Construction in Neenah, loves customized, one-of-a-kind projects where craftsmanship can shine. "My favorite thing about my job is when I'm given a lot of leeway to be creative," he says. Raehl's current specialty project is a walk-out basement inspired by an Irish pub. When planning a custom job, Welhouse suggests surfing the internet for ideas and bringing photos to your consultation.

Solid Surface Countertops

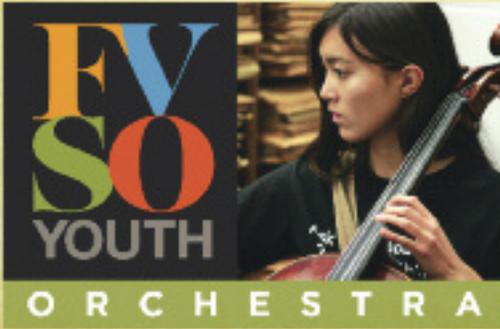

Updating countertops can be a quick, effective home project. While many different kinds of countertops will fit your ideal finish and budget, solid surface is a fairly new material to add to the mix. Solid surface countertops are a step up in quality from laminate countertops. They are also

THREE WAYS TO ACCENT
A SOLID SURFACE
COUNTERTOP

A simple backsplash: Subway tiling in muted shades is a simple way to make your countertops shine.

Modern lighting: To spotlight a solid surface kitchen island, try topping it off with mixed metal fixtures.

almost as durable as high-end stone countertops, but at a more affordable price point. Custom-made solid surface counters offer a seamless finish and can comfortably accommodate integrated sinks for a sleek, minimal look in both kitchens and bathrooms. They are a good option for families with children, since solid surface countertops are easy to clean, nonporous and stain-resistant.

Solid surface countertops in Corian, a man-made acrylic material, can come in many different colors and finishes and can be patterned after stone material like granite or quartz. "For quartz, price varies typically by supplier as well as by the thickness of the top," says Welhouse. "Granite, on the other hand, varies by the level you choose."

Fox Cities At Work

Interviews by Amelia Compton Wolff
Photography by David Jackson Photography

Five professionals show us that work in the Fox Cities is anything but boring.

Eric Marcoe, 41
Dream Coach
Miron Construction

“Most of my day is spent in conversation with people and most of those conversations are me listening. I try to max out my day at four coaching sessions. In order to be a good coach, I have to be present and completely set aside everything else going on in my life for the hour I’m with an individual. I become a mirror that allows them to relate to or see something differently. In one conversation, emotions can range from me handing someone the box of tissues to them jumping up and down because they are so excited. When I first started, I learned that the word ‘dream’ inspired some people and pushed others away. Some were excited about having a dream and others felt what they wanted wasn’t big enough to be a dream. We had to break through that thought process. It’s not big or small, it’s whatever direction you want to be moving in. A lot of times, the first hour a person spends with me is the first hour of their life that they let go of all the other noise around them. Letting go of that noise creates space to think free of judgement, to see options and opportunities. So many people function out of their head and feel out of their heart, but how do they come together? Sometimes in this space, that begins to happen.”

Mark Coenen, 62
ThedaStar Flight Nurse
ThedaCare Regional Medical Center

“There really isn’t a ‘normal’ day. Some days you have seven flights and some you don’t have any. Probably 70 percent of our business is hospital-to-hospital patient transfers. The other 30 percent is scene response, where we go to the scene of a car crash or someone’s house to get them to the closest hospital. People always ask me how I can do this work, that it must be depressing. Well, if you live for today, you’re going to be disappointed. But we look at these patients a month, six months, a year later and a lot of them have great recoveries and are doing really well. You wouldn’t picture that if you saw them at the scene of a car crash. After 30 years I still get nervous and I worry. You have the responsibility of someone’s life and that’s a big thing. Once you get the airway taken care of, get the IVs established and set with that patient, then I take a deep breath and I can relax but until then, boy, I worry. I might get paid by the hospital, but when I go out to do work, that patient is my boss.”

Thea Haessler, 28
Lead Scientist in the Physical Testing Department
Kimberly-Clark Corporation

“I have a mechanical engineering degree. There were times in college when mechanical engineering got tough, and I wondered if I even wanted to do it anymore. I was watching friends go out and play volleyball while I was stuck inside studying, but I’m glad I did because it paid off. I’ve been at KC since March 2016. We have baby mannequins that can walk and crawl, and we use them to test our products. Right now I’m working on a new generation of the mannequins. It’s exciting because I get to look into the material that we use to make the mannequins more human-like. When I was experimenting with new materials, I had these flesh-colored samples sitting on my desk. People would walk by and be like, ‘What is that? It looks like a chunk of person.’ Some people find that stuff gross, but I think it’s neat. I think it’s really interesting to work with a product that’s constantly evolving so much. KC’s products are directly for the consumer, so needs are always changing and there are always new developments. I like that this job has a lot of creative freedom. I’m not afraid to share an idea that may sound crazy to someone else. There are no bounds on what we can innovate.”

Rebecca Kraft, 47
Bakery Manager
Festival Foods

“Anybody who can draw can be taught to decorate a cake. Some people just catch on by watching other people. That’s how I did it. Each individual decorator is going to have their own way, which gives more of a selection to our guests. Personally, I just grab the tubes and start decorating whatever my hands decide to do. I have about 21 people on my team right now. Whether it’s a baker, cake decorator or myself, we’re all coming up with new ideas for flavors and concepts. Everybody pitches in and we do a taste test. I do not taste test, because about two years ago I had to go gluten-free, so I can’t eat the stuff anymore. I have to rely on my team now for taste. On average, I would say we go through about 350 to 400 donuts during the week and on weekends it’s more like 600 to 700. White iced long johns are the number one seller always. That and our triple chocolate donut are must-haves all the time. One of the best parts of my job is seeing the reactions we get from guests, how happy they are when we offer certain things. Those reactions just keep me going.”

Lance Williams, 42
Co-Owner and Special Effects Makeup Artist
The Panic Chambers Haunted House at Annie's
Campground

"I started doing my mom's makeup for costume parties when I was younger, but I originally got into special effects makeup when I saw artist Dale Kuipers making monsters in Green Bay. I always thought people could only do monsters in Hollywood. Panic Chambers has been going for five years already and we just signed a five-year deal with Annie's Campground. We're open every weekend in October and one weekend in September, doing 20 makeups a night. A lot of times it gets to be a mad scramble toward the finish line. But I wait all year for this, so when I get to do 20 makeups in one night, that's the best part. Every time I work on a character, I want the person to look like themselves, but transformed. I look at the features that define a person and keep those, then augment the features that will make people say, 'Wow.' Scaring people is sort of like chemistry. If you put the jumpiest person in the middle of a group and blast a door open as they walk by, the jumpy person scares the people behind them. The people in the front get it because they didn't see it coming. To me, it's about creating an atmosphere and perfecting my craft as an entertainer."

Stock Your Pantry

By Rebecca Rehberger
and Amelia Compton Wolff

Eat locally with our A–Z food guide

When you think of Wisconsin food, perhaps your mind goes straight for beer, cheese and brats. (Or beer cheese, or cheese brats, or cheese and beer soup – you get the idea.) But there's more to the Wisconsin food scene than that. There's something here for every palate, from gluten-free to vegetarian and from A to Z. The best part is that you don't need to travel far to find these worthy additions to your pantry – all of them are made in the Fox Cities.

A: apple cinnamon nut bread

With three locations in Appleton and Menasha, Manderfield's Bakery invites customers to try free samples and free smells. Their Apple Cinnamon Nut Bread, sweetened with local Kallas honey, has a satisfying crunch and a taste akin to monkey bread. It's the perfect addition to your weekend brunch.

B: brats

A football or baseball game in Wisconsin isn't complete without tailgating with brats. At Cedar Creek Marketplace in Appleton you can try all kinds of locally-made bratwurst, from the classic pork brat to unique flavors like Smoked Denver, whose casing is stuffed with meat from Midwestern small farms, green pepper, cheese and onion.

C: cheese curds

Despite competition from elsewhere, Wisconsin is still known as the Dairy State – few other places offer cheese curds in nearly every town gas station. Some of the best curds are found at Little Chute's Simon's Specialty Cheese, which uses milk from local farmers for a clean, rich, all-natural cheddar flavor and the obligatory squeak in your teeth.

D: Door County cherries

There's nothing more quintessentially 'Sconnie than Door County cherries, and Cherryland's Best in Appleton is your hook-up for "America's super fruit" year-round. They produce dried cherries and juices right on site, including a refreshing tart cherry concentrate that can be mixed with water, soda and even beer. Pick some up at their retail store or Woodman's Markets.

E: extra virgin olive oil

Whether used as a dip, poured over pasta, or heated for frying eggs, extra virgin olive oil is a healthful fat and a staple of a Mediterranean diet. The only problem is that finding the real deal can be tricky. The olive oil at the Olive Cellar in Appleton and Neenah not only comes in delicious flavors like Tuscan Herb, it's also certified through chemical analysis and sourced from the best suppliers in the world.

F: Full City Centro coffee

For fans of taking coffee black, New Morning Coffee Roasters in Appleton has a classic dark roast to offer: the Full City Centro, with a smoky and full-bodied yet smooth flavor. You can find it at Green Gecko Grocer and Café Debé in Appleton, New Moon Café in Oshkosh and at The Meat Block in Greenville.

G: gormutt dog treats

There are times when friends on four legs deserve a treat, and Two Paws Up Bakery in downtown Appleton delivers. Their Gormutt Dog Treats come in a variety of dog-approved flavors, such as BBQ rib and cheese dogs, with seasonal offerings and sweet candy- or carob-coated treats for special occasions or just when your dog has been especially good.

K Sauerkraut, a dish made with fermented cabbage, has plenty to offer: few calories, plenty of Vitamin C and other antioxidants, and no fat, cholesterol or gluten. Besides, European meats like Bavarian sausage and pierogi are hardly complete without it, and other cuisines around the world use similar foods, like Korean kimchi. But somehow, kraut is still a polarizing dish.

If sauerkraut is not your favorite food, get ready to change your mind. Saverne Kraut, produced in Appleton, creatively and deliciously mixes up this traditional dish by creating fresh kraut with on-trend flavors. Saverne offers two varieties: artisanal and raw. Artisanal kraut is made in small batches and is delicious either cold or hot, while raw kraut adds an extra-healthy twist by retaining sauerkraut's natural probiotics. All are available with flavors of dill and garlic, sriracha, and curtido. Raw kraut also comes in a traditional, mildly sweet Bavarian flavor made with caraway seeds, and the artisanal line offers a craft beer-flavored kraut.

Not only is Saverne Kraut delicious, you can also incorporate it into your diet in unexpected ways. Kraut can be a condiment, eaten on the side, or even the main event of the meal – the ways to eat it go far beyond just Reuben sandwiches. Add kraut to soup or eggs, put it on top of pizza or burgers, or wrap it up in lettuce wraps and egg rolls. You can even add it to brownies and cakes. The kraut adds moisture and a texture like coconut.

Even if kraut wasn't your favorite food before, the clean ingredient panel, delicious flavors and crunchy texture make Saverne's Kraut a sure bet. Combine that with the current trends in sour and fermented foods that turned kombucha and Greek yogurt into rock stars, and sauerkraut might just be poised for a comeback. You can buy the kraut in a resealable pouch or in glass jars at Festival Foods stores throughout the Fox Cities.

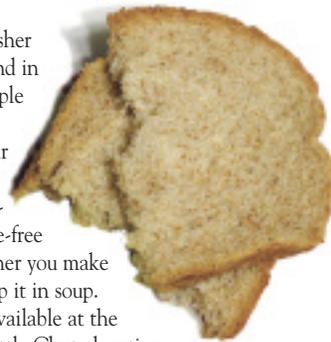

H: hot bacon dressing

Schnitzel, rippchen and sauerbraten – Mark's East Side in Appleton has offered these and many more German-American delicacies for decades. Their salad is served with hot bacon dressing, a warm, sugary and vinegary house sauce that also tastes delicious in German potato salad. You can either order it alongside a meal or buy it by the jar to take home.

I: Israeli bread

For a long time, kosher bread was difficult to find in the Fox Cities, but Simple Simon Bakery has remedied that with their popular Israeli Bread. The fat-free bread is all-natural and preservative-free with a bold taste, whether you make it into a sandwich or dip it in soup. Israeli bread is always available at the bakery's Appleton or Little Chute locations.

J: jalapeno nacho dip

If you like the Baja sauce from Taco Bell, you'll like this offering from Soup and Dipity in Black Creek even more. Mix the dip with sour cream, plain Greek yogurt or cream cheese to make a moderately spicy cheese sauce flavored with jalapeno and a hint of chipotle. Slather on tacos, burgers or scrambled eggs. Soup and Dipity is a regular feature of craft fairs and farmers markets around the Fox Cities and has an online store.

L: lemon chevre ravioli

A pop of lemon flavor in goat cheese, encased in homemade dough made with roasted beets from Fond du Lac – this take on ravioli from Appleton’s own Dalla Terra Pasta is a foodie’s dream. Unlike Dalla Terra’s more classic pastas, which are available at the Appleton Farmers Market, the Olive Cellar, Breadsmith, and SAP, this kind of ravioli is made to order. However, it’s well worth the wait.

M: marinara

Carmella’s Italian Bistro in Appleton sells four of their homemade pasta sauces by the jar and their House Marinara needs to be your go-to tomato sauce, if it isn’t already. Slather it on everything from pizza to quinoa, or just pour it over a generous serving of pasta with a dollop of herbed ricotta on the side. Available at Carmella’s, SAP and many other local retailers.

N: Nirvana Chai

Few things are better for cold days than a hot cup of tea, and Fava Tea has something for everyone. One of their proprietary loose-leaf blends, Nirvana Chai, gives black tea a warm, slightly sweet and spicy twist with lemongrass, cinnamon, coconut and cardamom. Fava Tea’s flagship store in Appleton carries over a hundred kinds of loose-leaf tea from every corner of the world.

O: Old Fashioned mix

The unofficial cocktail of Wisconsin, a good Old Fashioned is hard to find outside a bartender’s reach. That’s why Gary VerVoort created an Old Fashioned mix in traditional and orange flavors. Simply mix with brandy, whiskey, or Southern Comfort, splash with sweet or sour soda and enjoy. The Old Fashioned mix was first bottled at Kerrigan Brothers Winery, but you can also pick up the mix at Woodman’s, Festival Foods, and Piggly Wiggly in Kaukauna and Little Chute.

P: popcorn

What started as a cart on Wisconsin Avenue in Appleton has grown into a fan-favorite snack throughout the Fox Cities. Using high-quality ingredients and a top-secret recipe, Mike’s Popcorn makes classic popcorn in butter, cheese and caramel from scratch in Kaukauna. The popcorn is available at the Appleton farmers market, Piggly Wiggly, and local supermarkets. Their Popcorn of the Month subscription is also the perfect complement to a movie addiction.

Q: quality local meats

The Fox Cities is a meat lover's paradise, but any local will tell you not to miss out on the German-style sausages made the old-fashioned way in house at Jacob's Meat Market in Appleton. Natural casing brats and hotdogs are mainstays, especially during grilling season, and dry-cured bacon is a year-round delight at this corner market that has been family-owned for three generations.

U: Uncle Mike's kringle

If you thought the best kringle could only be found in Racine, you thought wrong. Uncle Mike's Bake Shoppe in Green Bay won a national award for their Sea Salt Caramel Pecan Kringle, and their Big Hawaiian (caramel, macadamia and white chocolate), Caramel Apple and Turtle kringles have won awards as well. They regularly sell at the Appleton and Green Bay farmers market in the summer, and they also sell online and in their store.

V: Vande Walle's chocolate

R: Red Barn cheese

Part of Red Barn Family Farms' secret for award-winning cheese is rewarding farmers for high-quality milk and humane treatment of their cows. Not only that, but Red Barn creates their cheese with fresh milk, sourced from seven local farmers. The company's passion has paid off: the Weis line of cheese has won 16 awards in national and international competitions. Red Barn also sells the only true raw milk cheddar in the state, called Edun, which is made by a master cheesemaker in Berlin. You can pick up both kinds at the Appleton Woodman's and the Arthur Bay Cheese Company.

W: whole chocolate milk

When it comes to the freshest milk, few are equal to Lamer's Dairy, who gets milk from farm to the table in a matter of hours. Using only the highest quality milk from local family farms that are less than 20 miles from Appleton, Lamer's creates their award-winning Whole Chocolate Milk, which strikes a perfect balance between sweet, bitter, and creamy. Pick some up at Festival Foods, Woodman's, Larry's Piggly Wiggly, and at niche grocers.

S: Spats sauce

This isn't any ordinary horseradish. Spats Food & Spirits, a classically American restaurant in downtown Appleton, offers a special house horseradish sauce with every meal and by the bottle. Spicy and creamy with a bit of tang, Spats sauce has been poured on nearly everything: sandwiches and salmon, fries and burgers, eggs and vegetables. It's available all over Appleton's local grocery markets; a complete list is on the company's website.

T: tapenade

Tapenade is a dish made with finely chopped olives, capers, spices, roasted garlic and olive oil. A local favorite is the olive tapenade by Irresistibly Healthy, available at Hippie Wayne's Green Tomato in Appleton. It can spice up dozens of different dishes, from pizza to pasta to pork chops. The makers of the tapenade are committed to creating sustainable, organic, local, and nutritious food in every bite.

Q. Does the shape of a wine or beer glass really affect the way a beverage tastes? —Brad, Appleton

A. Now this question required me to do an extensive amount of research...just kidding! To answer the question, yes, I believe that the shape of the glass has a definite impact on the level of satisfaction for the consumer. Over the course of history, glassware has taken unique shapes to suit each beverage being served. For example, red wine glasses and snifters are rounded goblets to allow the consumer to swirl the beverage so it can aromatize and allow the sense of smell to play a significant role in the consumptive experience. Champagne flutes are tall and cylindrical to minimize the escape of the effervescence of the champagne, while champagne glasses for toasting are wide and flat for an efficient sip after the toast. White wine glasses have long stems to allow the consumer to keep the heat of the hand away from the cool beverage. Beer mugs are thick and sturdy, serving as insulators to keep the beer cold for as long as possible. And margarita glasses...well, you get the point. Brad, I suggest you conduct your own extensive research on this topic and see what kind of results you get!

VJust across the street from the Fox River Mall, Vande Walle's Candies has grown up along with the area and become famous for its sweet treats. Starting from a collection of time-tested recipes and a store in Shawano, the candy store has become a classic of the Fox Cities. Since their start in 1975, Vande Walle's has won 35 awards for their chocolates, bakery, and ice cream, including Best in Show at the Retail Confectioners' International Convention in 2015.

Vande Walle's owes much of their success to recipes from the owner's grandmother, traditional ingredients and methods of cooking, and the best exclusively wholesale chocolate manufacturer they could find. But even though they have traditional roots, they're also constantly innovating and keeping an eye on trends. Their most recent offerings are made with sea salt, which adds a complicated and balancing flavor to candies. Some of their best-sellers are sea salt caramels, sea salt turtles, and chocolate-covered potato chips. One of their unique and most-acclaimed offerings, the Chocolate of Champions, is a crunchy concoction made with sea salt, Wheaties cereal, chocolate and thin ribbons of caramel. The store also offers a wide variety of delicious seasonal treats: caramel apples, peanut brittle, popcorn balls, and cookies for every occasion. They even make traditional Christmas angel food candy eight months out of the year.

Vande Walle's efforts to blend food trends with old-world tradition has paid off. The store is still going strong after over 30 years, offering more than 95 different kinds of chocolates, cakes and ice cream. If you're visiting Appleton and craving a sweet treat, a stop by the store is almost mandatory. Those from a little further away can also buy at their online store.

X: x-tra hot salsa

If you can't decide between marinara or Mexican, Godere Salsa in Appleton has got you covered. The family that runs the business draws upon their heritage, time-tested recipes and fresh ingredients to bring homemade salsa an Italian twist. Their most spicy offering, the Original Ridiculous salsa, definitely offers a kick to your mouth, with jalapeno, red chili and habanero peppers in the mix. You can find it at the Appleton Farmers Market and Woodman's.

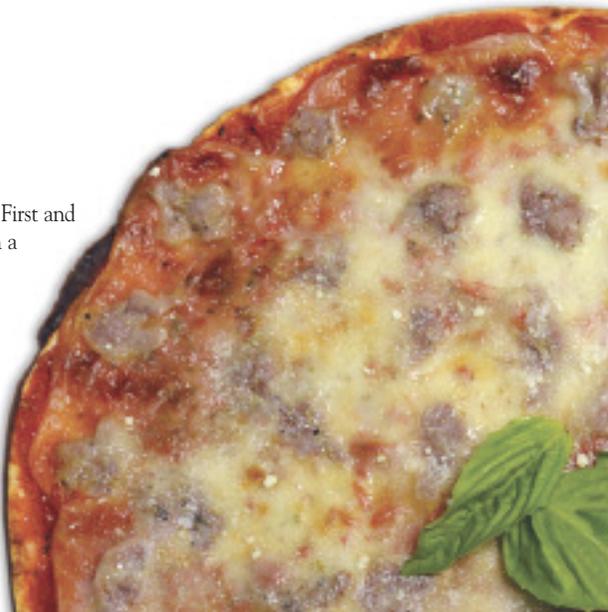

Y: yellow cake mix

The tasty treat from Mudd Creek Foods' yellow cake mix looks and tastes like a cake, but has one important difference. This cake mix is entirely gluten-free, made in a dedicated gluten-free facility in Appleton. Mudd Creek started offering gluten-free baking mixes after spending two years developing a gluten-free mix that kept familiar tastes and textures. With the yellow cake mix, there's no need to add pudding; it's naturally moist because of xanthan gum already added in. Mudd Creek is a frequent feature at specialty grocery shops and fairs all over the Valley.

Z: 'za

With sausage made from freshly ground pork and whole-milk mozzarella, their frozen pizza is one of the best of its kind in town.
